Brief Description of Course or Conference Content:

The scope of the Course is to provide to the participants the analysis of the latest international and national regulations in the field of maritime and transport law, with prominent lecturers from various Croatian academic institutions (Adriatic Institute of the Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts – Zagreb, University of Zagreb, University of Rijeka, University of Dubrovnik, University of Zadar and University of Split) as well as from a number of higher education institutions from abroad (University of Bologna, University of Ljubljana, University of Oslo, Nicolaus Copernicus University – Torun, Kyushu University – Fukuoka, Jaume I University – Castellon, Jimei University, Xiamen, University of Vigo, City University – London, College of Charleston, International Maritime Law Institute – Malta and World Maritime University – Malmö).

The Course will enable young researchers from this area to gain new knowledge and to compare the legal regulations of different countries through classes of outstanding university professors and renowned maritime law experts, and also to participate in panel discussions in order to analyse potential solutions of the emerging international legal instruments and of proposed amendments of the relevant maritime conventions. Besides lectures, seminars and workshops, the Course structure requires an effective contribution of participants who will have an opportunity to represent and describe their own research projects related to their LLM or PhD studies before a circle of academic senior researchers and experienced professionals. The working language is English.

Does your programme offer ECTS credits and if yes what are the requirements?

The Course attendance certificates signed by the Course directors will be issued by the Inter-University Centre to all participants. This year's Course will not offer ECTS credits. The procedure of ECTS accreditation will be initiated, and should be completed during the next academic year with the aim that the Course attendance certificate would be equivalent to 4 ECTS.

Expected number of participants:

The expected number of participants is 25, whereas the total number of participants is limited to 50. The participants will have to pay a modest registration fee (50 EUR) directly to the Inter-University Centre. Additional fee of 50 EUR that will cover the cost of lunches and coffee breaks will be paid to the Croatian Maritime Law Association. For covering travel and accommodation expenses, interested participants are strongly advised to contact their home institutions as well as other foundations that finance participation in educational programmes. Course directors can provide potential participants with formal invitation letters if needed. Concerned participants may apply until 31 August 2023 using the online application form at the IUC website. Please contact the Course coordinator Dr Igor Vio (igor.vio@pfri.uniri.hr) for any additional questions.

What is the main characteristic of the course:

The Course is dedicated to participants enrolled in advanced degrees of legal studies (graduate and postgraduate students, as well as doctoral candidates and researchers, who will discuss their ongoing research), junior practitioners and law officials from international organizations, state administration, courts of law and public attorney offices, and to young professionals from shipping, transport, insurance and related industries.

Is there research output expected from this course/conference and if so, in what form?

Possible research output as contribution from the IMTL Course will be published in the Inter-University Centre Working Paper Series.
