Students Guide to the School of Social Work

Call for student contributions
You are participating as a student?
The summer school week in September is a place where academics, social workers and social work students exchange on relevant and topical issues. Everyone's contribution is of value. Please don't hesitate to organise your own contribution! You can
You can organise a presentation, workshop or discussion. Alone or with other students. The form is up to you. You can also cover issues that are not directly related to the themes of the week.
Possible topics (next to the themes mentioned in the programme):
- An experience you have had at school or in the work field
- A project you have worked on
- A working method or method you would like to share
- A social development that you observe
Participants are open to students' perspectives. You don't have to be insecure that you don't have much experience. In fact, we want to learn from your fresh perspective.
The duration of your contribution is about 30 minutes (if you are working with a large group, it may be longer). Part of that time can be used for your input. It is helpful if we have time to discuss your topic with each other. So allow a maximum of 20 minutes for your input.
Please send your proposal via E-Mail or Web - see: Call for Abstracts
